Fight... for Your Right to Potty!

Now, as a senior housing operator, I thought about how these bidet toilet seats could contribute to my bottom line (no pun intended).

Simple...attracting the best workforce and eliminating staffing challenges by giving the staff and the residents a tool that will help them with these most personal care tasks. Today, staff are required to provide personal hygiene care; cleaning the most private parts of the human body. Simple continence care, like cleaning and drying a resident, can now be done by the residents, in their own apartments, all on the toilet.

With these innovative bidet toilet seats, the power wash and dry options will literally free up the hands of caregivers to provide other vital services and most importantly allow our residents the dignity, privacy, and independence they all want and deserve. Think of the marketing differentiator possibilities to attract residents struggling with incontinence issues today, as well as the ease with which your current residents may age in place. We would continue to offer and charge for adult protective garments and services as well as prompt memory impaired residents to use the toilet. However, most residents would prefer to conduct their own personal hygiene care.

The variety of challenges we face as operators of residential communities related to personal hygiene impact our ability to retain more independent residents and attract new residents. Mitigating those unpleasant odors with a tool like these state-of-the-art bidet toilet seats also will enhance continence management, allowing residents to feel clean and fresh whenever they want or may be prompted. This means we increase residents', families', visitors', and associates' satisfaction.

As we know from senior housing occupancy statistics, the higher the resident satisfaction, the higher the occupancy, therefore, the bottom line is increased. I can't wait to hear of the first senior community and owner willing to make these amazing bidet toilet seats a capital improvement or ground up investment in their construction and development costs. I know your bottom line will improve and you will be ready to potty!
